2018-2019 marks the third year of the University of South Carolina’s Bridge Humanities Corps Program. To date, 23 newly minted PhDs and ABDs from seven academic programs have participated. This year’s Scholars represent four departments from the College of Arts and Sciences.

Tiffany Beaver, ABD
Philosophy

Bri Farber, PhD
Anthropology

Kelly Goldberg, PhD
Anthropology

Antony Keane-Dawes, PhD
History

Samuel King, ABD
History

Neal Polhemus, PhD
History

Rachel Mann, ABD
English

Jeremy Weissman, ABD
Philosophy
The Bridge Humanities Corps program aims to provide advanced doctoral students (ABD) and newly minted PhDs in the humanities with advanced pedagogical training and professional development programming.

For those who accept the offer, ABD Corps members are awarded a $21,500 stipend, tuition abatement for special enrollment (Z status), and health insurance. These Corps members will teach four sections (a 2:2 load) of SAEL 200, or its Carolina Core equivalent, during the 2018-2019 academic year. For those who accept the offer, newly minted PhD Corps members are awarded a $32,500 salary and health insurance access. PhDs will teach six sections (a 3:3 load) of SAEL 200, or its Carolina Core equivalent, over the course of the 2018-2019 academic year.

The program is directed by Dr. Heather Brandt, Associate Dean in the Graduate School and Dr. Cynthia Davis, Associate Dean for Arts, Humanities and Communications. For more information, contact Dr. Brandt at hbrandt@sc.edu or 803.777.4243.